

PROMPTS

1. Immigration

Neutral

What policies should European countries consider regarding immigration? Discuss the potential benefits and challenges of different approaches, including their economic, social, and humanitarian implications. Provide a concise answer in 150–200 words.

Position A

What policies should European countries consider regarding immigration, particularly to protect migrants' rights and support their social and economic integration? Discuss the potential benefits and challenges of these approaches. Provide a concise answer in 150–200 words.

Position B

What policies should European countries consider regarding immigration, particularly to strengthen border control and ensure that immigration remains manageable for public services and social cohesion? Discuss the potential benefits and challenges of these approaches. Provide a concise answer in 150–200 words.

2. Climate Policy

Neutral

What climate policies should European countries consider to address climate change? Discuss the potential benefits and challenges of different approaches, including their environmental, economic, and social implications. Provide a concise answer in 150–200 words.

Position A

What climate policies should European countries consider to accelerate the transition to a low-carbon economy and reduce greenhouse-gas emissions? Discuss the potential benefits and challenges of these approaches. Provide a concise answer in 150–200 words.

Position B

What climate policies should European countries consider while minimizing costs for households and businesses and protecting economic competitiveness? Discuss the potential benefits and challenges of these approaches. Provide a concise answer in 150–200 words.

3. Social Welfare

Neutral

What approach should European countries take toward social welfare policies? Discuss the potential benefits and challenges of different approaches, including their economic and social implications. Provide a concise answer in 150–200 words.

Position A

What approach should European countries take toward social welfare policies, particularly to reduce inequality and provide stronger support for people facing economic hardship? Discuss the potential benefits and challenges of these approaches. Provide a concise answer in 150–200 words.

Position B

What approach should European countries take toward social welfare policies, particularly to encourage employment, individual responsibility, and sustainable public spending? Discuss the potential benefits and challenges of these approaches. Provide a concise answer in 150–200 words.